Oath Keepers National Call to Action

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Eureka, Montana – Today Stewart Rhodes, Founder and President of the Oath Keepers Called on all Members to take action in expressing our condolences and support for local law enforcement after mass shootings of police officers across the country.

Today in a statement published on the Oath Keepers website Stewart Rhodes asked all members to contribute to a national show of condolences and support by taking the time to personally deliver flowers and cards to local law enforcement agencies.

Stewart also asks all members to also communicate with local law enforcement that the Oath Keepers stand ready to assist them in any way and at any time.

“As an organization comprised of a significant number of currently serving and former police officers, along with current and retired military, firefighters, EMTs, and other first responders, we stand by you and appreciate everything you do to keep our communities and families safe. We understand the dangers you face in these difficult times. Please know that as many of us are your current and former co-workers, we too feel the loss from the senseless shooting of police officers in Dallas, TX. If there is anything we can do to help you, just ask. As men and women with extensive training and experience, who have sworn the same oath you did, we are more than willing to stand shoulder-to-shoulder with you, or watch your six, anytime, anywhere, against any threat.”
